This paper uses data across 365 corridors to document time and country variation in the sending country and lower remittance fees and explore factors predicting variation in the sending country and lower remittance fees. We document a general reduction in such fees over the past decade although the goal of fees below 3 percent has not been met yet in many corridors. We identify both cost- and Internet rather than cash payment are associated with lower remittance fees. Finally, remittance corridors dominated by banks and few players are characterized by higher fees.
