bandits, and teeming with forty-niners and confederate sympathizers chronicles the chaotic early days of Los Angeles, which boasted the highest homicide rate in America by 1850. From profiles of the frontier-style lawmen hired to stop the initial mayhem to an analysis of the city's modern sheriff's office—the largest in America—this book draws comparisons between the uproar of the early days, the racial tensions that erupted during the Watts riots, and the safety issues that preoccupy the police force today.

Next the report looks at specific training provided on new LASD policies and the way in which the Department can effectively communicate its commitment to those new policies. In particular the 2004 foot pursuit policy was contrasted with the Department's effort to educate deputies on the amended policy for shooting moving vehicles after the Compton shooting. Some preliminary observations concerning two weeks of major inmate disturbances in the Los Angeles County jails appears that the deputies and command staff ably handled the disturbances. police work—the tedium of guarding jail inmates, the consternation of shoot/don ’ t-shoot scenarios, the trauma of being wounded in the line of duty—and offers an insider ’ s view of iconic moments in law enforcement, including the capture of “ Night Stalker ” Richard Ramirez and the 1992 L.A. Riots. Along the way he examines a profession increasingly beleaguered by inimical agendas, administrative cowardice and fiscal restraints.

This thesis will analyze the disciplinary patterns and the complaint system of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department (LASD). It reveals if there is significance when multiple officers engage in improper acts as opposed to when a single officer engages in the same acts. The study will identify the most common types of accusations filed against sworn personnel, what ranks are most commonly involved (i.e. deputy, sergeant, etc.), and what assignments (i.e. patrol) incur the most investigations.

This report concludes our year-long look at the LASD's internal investigations. In the previous report, the procedures of the receipt, investigation, and resolutions of complaints at the station level were examined. This study breaks ground as a large-scale study of self-regulation within a major urban law enforcement agency. The second half of this report is a status report on
