Crowd scene. Picture yourself in a wide open space. A communal garden, say. It is hot. And very crowded. Groups of people lounge about on the grass. You cannot see the green for the sunbathers. And many more surge raggedly along the paths. Every bit of space is taken up. Plus it's far too noisy for anyone who wants to do some thinking.

Meditations using ordinary language and every day experience to assist young people in developing a pattern of prayer, reflection, and daily meditation.

Life is an adventure sometimes we take it for granted. Reflections of my heart are things, emotions and feelings i have felt and lived through in my life that many of you may be able to relate to as well. People come into your life for a reason, a season or a lifetime When someone is in your life for a REASON, it is usually to meet a need you have expressed They have come to assist you through a difficulty, to provide you with guidance and support To aid you physically, emotionally or spiritually They may seem like a godsend and they are. They are there for the REASON you need them to be. Some people come into your life for a SEASON, because your turn has come to share, grow or learn. They bring you an experience of peace or make you laugh. They may teach you something you have never done. They usually give you an unbelievable amount of joy. Believe it, it is real. But only for a SEASON LIFETIME relationships teach you lifetime lessons, Things you must build upon in order to have a solid emotional Foundation... Your job is to accept the lesson, Love the person and put what you have learned to use in all other Relationships and areas of your life. It is said that love is blind but friendship is clairvoyant. Thank you for being a part of my life, Whether you were a reason, a season or a lifetime.

As scholarly interest has turned to emotion and affect, Reflections on Sentiment offers examples of Enlightenment feeling both challenging and promoting the period's touted reason and realism. Essays explore the complex relation of thought and sentiment in discourses from moral treatises and religious debates to interrogations of gender and family relations, from fictional tests of boundaries between human and non-human species to innovations in the forms of poetry, the novel, and the literary marketplace itself.

“This book is just that: reflections of a highly polished mind that uncannily approximate the century's fragments of shattered traditions.” — Time A companion volume to Illuminations, the first collection of Walter Benjamin's writings, Reflections presents a further sampling of his wide-ranging work. Here Benjamin evolves a theory of language as the medium of all creation, discusses theater and surrealism, reminisces about Berlin in the 1920s, recalls conversations with Bertolt Brecht, and provides travelogues of various cities, including Moscow under Stalin. Benjamin moves seamlessly from literary criticism to autobiography to philosophical-theological speculations, cementing his reputation as one of the greatest and most versatile writers of the twentieth century.

On the one hand, Eagleton demolishes what he calls the "superstitious" view of God held by most atheists and agnostics and offers in its place a revolutionary account of the Christian Gospel. On the other hand, he launches a stinging assault on the betrayal of this revolution by institutional Christianity. There is little joy here, then, either for the anti-God brigade -- Richard Dawkins and Christopher Hitchens in particular -- nor for many conventional believers. --Résumé de l'éditeur.
