My main issue with The Runaway Princess is that it feels too recycled. Browne's heroines are all a bit too alike, something I'm at odds with because they make me feel like a good friend of Browne's. To have four main, first person characters who all share several identical traits is a bit much to believe it's not totally coincidentally fictional.

But there are also drawbacks: imagine the anxiety of meeting your boyfriend ' s parents multiplied by a factor of “ riding in a private jet, ” “ staying in a castle, ” and “ discussing the line of succession over lunch. ” Not to mention the sudden press interest in your very un-royal family.
